ASSUMING RESPONSIBILITY

When you suffer an injury due to another person's negligence, do not be surprised if the negligent party's insurance company rebuffs your damage claims. In most cases, there will be a denial of liability. In the hope that the accident victim will take its word at face value or will drop his or her claim out of frustration, the insurance company may say its policyholder was not to blame for the accident. Confronted with this turn of events, accident victims should take it upon themselves to make an appointment with an attorney for an initial consultation. This enables the lawyer to assess the facts of the case and give an opinion as to whether the matter should be legally pursued.

Being injured through another's negligence and managing the resulting inconvenience and uncertainty, can be difficult, even under the best circumstances. If you have suffered a personal injury due to negligence, you have the right to be compensated. When you require legal assistance, call us to schedule a free initial consultation. Personal injury cases are our specialty and for your convenience, we offer hospital and in-home visits.

HINT: By taking a personal injury case on a contingency-fee basis, attorneys enable accident victims to proceed legally with little to lose and much to gain.
