MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE

When is a person who has not worked a day in his or her life able to show a loss of income that can factor into a damage award in a personal injury suit? The answer to this paradoxical question involves the college student who misses a year of study due to an injury caused by another. Had the injury not occurred, the student would have entered the job market sooner than the injury made possible. As a result, the student would be entitled to compensation for that year's loss of probable earnings. In these and other matters, those who consult with attorneys about their injuries may well learn that there is more to their potential suit than meets the eye.

A qualified law professional can help you determine the best path to follow to get what you deserve. We handle a variety of matters involving personal injury, auto accidents, on the job injuries, wrongful death, loss of limbs, and insurance disputes. When you need legal assistance, call our office to schedule a free initial consultation. For your convenience, we offer hospital and in-home visits.

HINT: The injured college student mentioned above should also take into account one less year of employment before retirement and subsequent loss of pension benefits.
